

WHO WE ARE

Founded in 1999, Six Feet Up is a woman-owned company that develops, hosts and supports open source sophisticated web projects, from enterprise content management and collaborative intranets to mobile apps. Our clients include top universities and life sciences organizations, growing and distributed teams, as well as Fortune 500 companies.

As a company, we are heavily involved in giving back to the open source community.

DEVELOPMENT

Six Feet Up is focused on the development of advanced content solutions. Whether it is a complex CMS for hundreds of websites, a way to integrate multiple web applications, or custom app development, we've done it. We believe in the power, security, and scalability of Python-based applications. Our team stays on top by contributing back to open source, speaking at major conferences, and leading development workshops around the world.

"Six Feet Up is a valuable partner [that] delivers high-quality software on time and on budget,"

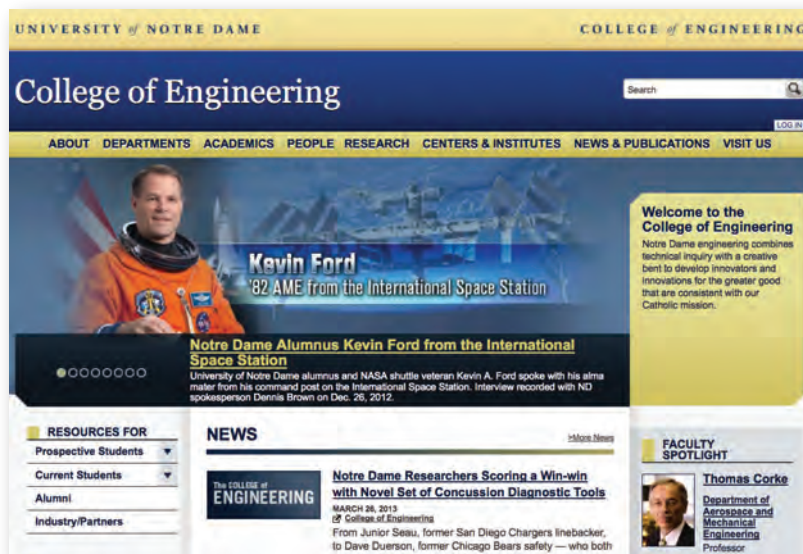

– Matt Bowen, as Director of Technology Services at Stratacomm

HOSTING

Six Feet Up specializes in hosting advanced websites, intranets, and critical web applications that require a hands-on managed hosting environment. We are the largest Plone host and host the official plone.org and plonedemo.com websites.

Because we offer hosting, application support, and development, we can quickly fix issues and avoid the "finger pointing slowdown". We have servers with 100% uptime for years, and host critical applications for Fortune 100 companies. We offer state-of-the-art monitoring and system administrators on call 24/7. Our infrastructure includes redundant data centers with multi-factor security, redundant internet connectivity, and redundant cooling.
